ASS. 01.1

Delivery: 20th March

The goal is to understand the complexity of contemporary dwelling through the study of new ways to live. You'll start from analyzing your own habitat, later on you'll map some case studies between your friends and your acquaintances.

For Ass.01.1 every student has to report his own habitat. Starting from a simple reflection on how many beds you have at your disposal, through a photo survey describe the space you live in, and sketch the plan to report space and relations.

For each place where you have a bed:

1. > describe the people and relations existing among inhabitants (max 1500 strokes)
2. > make a photo survey (of the one you are living in)
3. > sketch the plan, with furniture and addressing who and how space is lived (approx. scale 1:50)
